

WAG Scholars' Working Group on German Rabbis after 1933 at LMU München

Personal details

Dan Wolf
1375 Opechee Way
Glendale, CA 91208
USA
dan@lonewolfwriting.com

Statement of interest

Currently, I am working on something of a biography of my father, Rabbi Alfred Wolf, who was one of the five rabbinic students brought from Berlin to the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Project Outline

During his last years, I engaged with my father in daily emails, many of which focused on recollections of his life. The very last email he wrote me, less than three months before he died, was, "You can move some of your pieces." The subtitle of the book will be, "How to live from two who've died." The bulk of the book will be on Dad. But there will also be a chapter on my brother, David, who died in 2021 of leukemia. During his two years of battling the disease, he wrote an incredible blog chronicling the experience as well as sharing views on life. The words of these two dynamic men in their last days on earth I believe provide inspiration and guidance for those of us still living.

Presentation

You Can Move Some of Your Pieces
How to Live From Two Who've Died
by
Alfred Wolf
David Wolf
Dan Wolf

Short Bio

Dan Wolf is founder and principal (aka, lone wolf) of Lone Wolf Writing Company. As such, he provides a full range of writing services to a select client list that includes a number of familiar household names.

From 1989-2007, Wolf served as Vice President of Corporate Communications at The Walt Disney Company. During his 18 years in that position, he was involved in a wide variety of internal and external communication projects, including preparation of Disney annual reports, shareholder meetings and presentations by CEO Michael Eisner, CEO Bob Iger, Chairman George Mitchell, Chairman John Pepper and Vice Chairman Roy Disney, among other senior executives. In addition, he played a central role in crisis management efforts during a number of widely-covered media and shareholder challenges faced by the company.

Before joining Disney, Wolf served as Senior Press Deputy to Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn for ten years, and prior to that he was Editorial Assistant at NBC News.

A member of the Writers Guild of America, Dan has a B.A. in History from the University of California at Santa Cruz and an M.A. in Urban Studies from Occidental College. He empty nests in Glendale, California with Elly, his wife of 48 years.